CYS / Project Together Newsletter Vol. XVII, No. 7

For Your Information...

JoAnn Hill, CYS-Project Together mentor for North Region, shared some great information at one of the recent "Make It Simple" mentor trainings. To help her mentee feel more secure, JoAnn, a teacher, sits down with the child once a month to make up a calendar of activities. The child had a fear of the unknown and was afraid to try anything new. JoAnn's strategy worked. Now both work together to plan out their activities...

Once again CYS-Project Together sent children and teenagers to summer camp, thanks to community donations and fund-raising events. Summer camp is a life-changing event for youth. For many Children and Youth Services clients, it means a new start in an environment without expectations. It can also be a first step toward independence and self-reliance, a boost to self-esteem, a respite or a time to stretch limits...

As a reminder, therapists may help CYS clients in need by submitting requests to the CYS-Project Together Resource Center for gently used clothing and personal grooming items. Call Curtis Livingston at (714)796-0100 or contact your Volunteer Coordinator for more information or to obtain request forms...

A highlight in the news on the mentoring front notes the success of the Groton Public Schools Mentoring Program in Groton, CT. An outgrowth of the national youth conventions, headed by retired Army Gen. Colin Powell (now Secretary of State), the Groton program paired 48 students of all ages with responsible adults. They meet for an hour

Volunteers Are Special

Mentor Helps Change Behavior

When North Region Volunteer Coordinator Sunney Shin asked if she could place a CYS-Project Together mentor recruitment flyer on the bulletin board at the Yorba Linda Public Library, an ongoing relationship began with librarian Ozgun Tumer.

He became curious and asked more about the mentoring program. After all, he had been looking for a volunteer opportunity. He liked what he heard, made an appointment for an interview and proceeded with mentor training.

He was matched with a 13-year-old boy who came from a family with a history of abuse. The two enjoyed each other's company, but the teenager felt he wanted to spend more time with his friends instead of his mentor. However, Ozgun did provide the boy with exposure to a positive male role model.

Ozgun was matched with a second child, an 11-year-old boy, who has issues with anger management in school and whose father is not involved in his life. As a mentor, Ozgun has demonstrated how to behave when faced with frustrating situations or when things don't go as you would like. This process has taken place through time spent together talking, or through many enrichment activities in which they participate. The two have gone to the beach, played basketball, gone to the movies, visited museums, as well as attended CYS-Project Together-sponsored outings.

Ozgun stated that his experience has been "Great!" and that he looks forward to the time they have together each week. The two have built a comfortable and supportive relationship. Now the child is able to confide in him. In addition, the boy has learned by example to better manage his anger and his behavior has improved.

Unlike earlier in their relationship, the child is now beginning to make suggestions for outings and even feels safe and comfortable enough to joke around.

Projects Corner

Celebrate America Throughout the Year

Make your own Fourth of July whirlygig that can be used throughout the year.

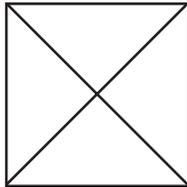

Or how about your own flying colors or American flag pin?

This is expected to be an extra patriotic Fourth of July in the U.S. Join the fun and make your own celebration. This project will leave you with something to keep up your patriotic spirits throughout the year.

Whirly-gig (Pinwheel)

Colorful heavy construction paper
Or heavy gauge Mylar

1-Inch pushpin
Drinking straw
Scissors
Pencil
Ruler
Balsawood stick

1. Cut an 8-inch square out of construction paper or Mylar.

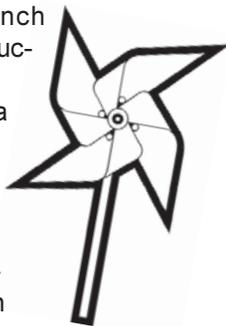

2. Using a pencil and ruler, connect opposite corners with a line, by drawing an "X" that covers the entire face of the 8-inch square.

3. Using the lines of the "X" as a guide, cut a 4-inch slit from each corner of the square toward the center.

4. Cut off ½-inch piece of drinking straw.

5. Pierce every other corner with pushpin, then stick pushpin through the center of the "X", again through the piece of drinking straw, and then into the stick. The straw spacer helps the pinwheel move more freely on the stick in the wind.

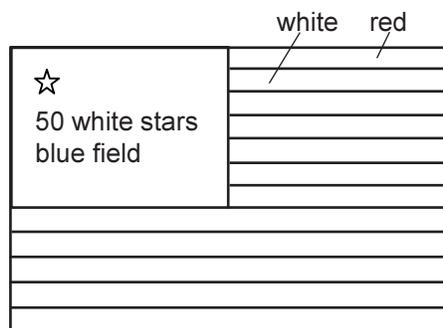

6. Go for a walk or stick it in the ground and watch it whirl with the wind. Can you tell which way the wind is coming from?

American Flag Pin

Small batch of salt dough
Dinner knife
Brown paper bag
Rolling pin
Small ruler
Lead pencil
Spatula
Safety pin
Poster paints in red, white and blue
Clear coating
Small paint brush

You might want to make more than one, so you can give the pins away to your friends.

1. Place a ball of salt dough on a paper bag. Roll out dough to 1/8-inch thickness.

2. Using a ruler and knife, cut a rectangle that is 1 ½" X 2 ¼". Using the spatula, set flag or flags aside on the paper bag. If it wrinkles a bit when moved, it will simply make it look more life-like.

3. While it is still wet, sink the back of the safety pin into the middle of the flag, leaving enough clearance so it can still open and close. Move flag to the sun to dry with pin side up or bake for 10-20 minutes in moderate oven.

4. When dry, turn the pin over. Following the illustration provided, draw a rectangular blue field on the upper left and stripes onto front of pin with a pencil. Then paint the field navy blue with white dabs for 50 stars and 13 red and white stripes (or less if you feel the need to be more abstract). Spray or paint with clear coating after the paint is dry.

5. Wear your treasure or give to a friend.

Salt Dough

1 cup plain white flour
1 cup fine salt
¼ cup water
1 tsp veg. oil
Poster paint

1. Mix ingredients in a bowl and knead for 10 minutes.

2. Depending on the consistency of the flour and the humidity, adjust ingredients to make dough soft, pliable, smooth (no flour coating) and non-sticky.

3. Allow to rest for 10-15 minutes before modeling.

4. This may be kept in refrigerator until ready to use.

5. To make dough in different colors, pull off as much dough as you want to color and knead in enough poster paint powder to achieve desired result.

Flying Colors

1 yard each of ½-inch to 1-inch wide satin ribbon red, white & blue

1 3-foot balsawood stick or a ¼-inch dowel

Scissors
Penny
Glue

1. Cut each length of ribbon into 2 uneven pieces.

2. Tie ribbons close together in any order you wish from top of dowel downward. This should take a maximum of 5 inches.

3. Glue penny to top end of dowel to keep ribbons from sliding off.

4. You may place this in the ground to blow in the wind for a colorful patriotic display or fly your colors at a parade.

Since the Revolution

Uniform Code for Flying Red, White & Blue

The Fourth of July holiday is a wonderful time for children, teenagers and adults to learn about the formation of our country and the important significance of our flag.

Mentors may "seize the day" as an outing opportunity to attend fireworks and share a bit of U.S. history with their child or teenager. Also, share the flag code, which is helpful when participating in school color guard or scouting activities.

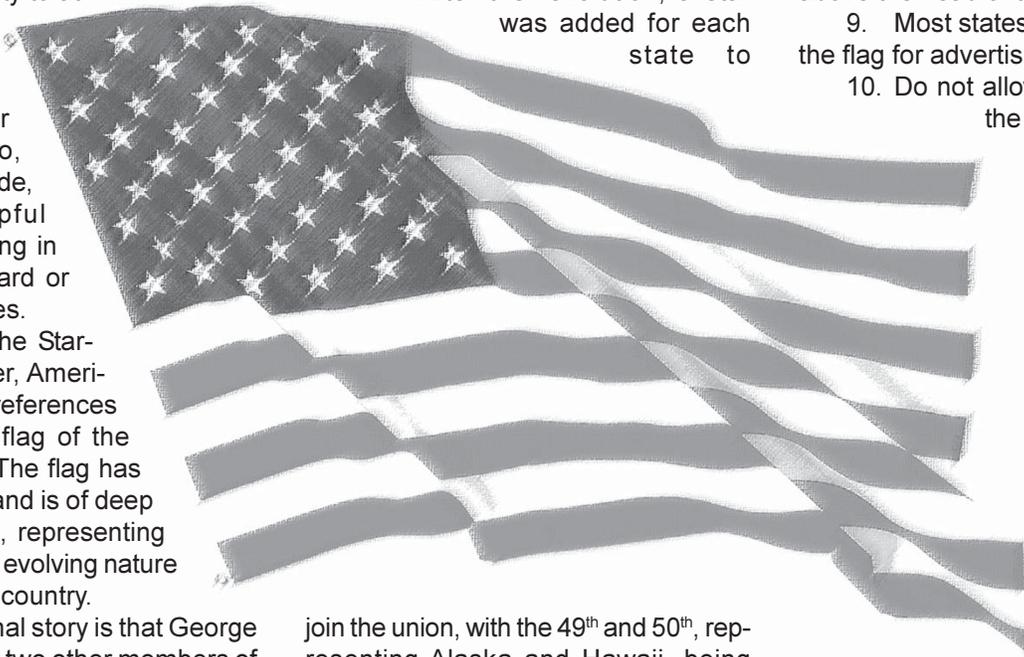

Old Glory, the Star-Spangled Banner, American flag, all are references to the national flag of the United States. The flag has a proud history and is of deep symbolic nature, representing the origin, goals, evolving nature and spirit of our country.

The traditional story is that George Washington and two other members of the secret committee of the Continental Congress in May of 1776, called on the struggling widow and upholsterer/seamstress, Betsy Ross. At great risk, in June of 1776, she began to make the first flag from a rough design given to her by General Washington, who was then head of the Continental Army. According to the oral history, she refined Washington's design and even changed his 6-pointed star. Betsy, a renowned snipper with the scissors, showed him how to make a 5-pointed star in a single cut, making it symbolic of the individual or human being.

According to the declaration of the 1777 Continental Congress, the flag has 13 stripes, each representing the original 13 colonies, whose citizens fought for freedom from England in the American Revolution. There are seven red stripes, which represent valor and hardiness of the Americans; alternating six white stripes, which signify purity and innocence of intentions of those who wanted freedom. The blue field represents vigilance, perseverance and justice. Each 5-pointed white star stands for each individual state in the Union.

After the revolution, a star was added for each state to join the union, with the 49th and 50th, representing Alaska and Hawaii, being added in 1959 and 1960.

Uniform U.S. Flag Code

1. Fly flag from sunrise to sunset in the open. It can be displayed after dark when a patriotic effect is desired, but it should be illuminated with lights.
2. Raise briskly and lower ceremoniously.
3. Fold in a triangle fold with blue field out.
4. Display daily and on designated holidays on or near administration buildings of all institutions.
5. Display near all polling places on election days and in or near every schoolhouse on school days.
6. When carried in processions with another flag, the American flag is to the right of the other emblems carried by marchers. When carried with several other flags, it is carried in front and center of other flags.

7. Fly at the top of the standard if raised with another flag.

8. When raised on a window or wall, the blue field is to the left of the observer. On a wall behind a speaker on a platform, it is to be behind and above the head of the speaker.

9. Most states prohibit the use of the flag for advertising purposes.

10. Do not allow the flag to touch the ground, floor or water or anything else beneath it.

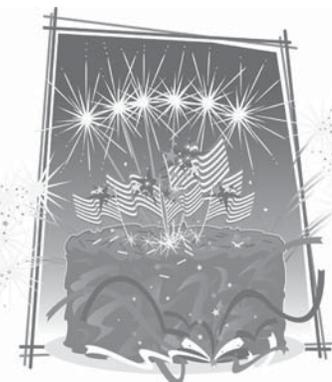

11. The American flag should not be used for any other purpose than as a flag. It is not to be used as clothing, draperies, ceiling decorations, etc.

12. When displayed on a car, the standard should be clamped to the right side of the car.

13. When wearing as a pin, it should be worn on the left over the heart.

14. Hanging the flag with the blue field of the union down signals extreme distress.

15. When it is worn and tattered, it should be buried with respect. Many American Veterans groups accept flags to retire with ceremony.

Mentor Helps Change Behavior

"He's a fun kid," says Ozgun, who seems to be enjoying his mentoring experience immensely. He sets time aside each week to spend with the child, who is learning that the adults in his life can be kind, reliable and consistent.

Ozgun works closely with Carol Dubois, Psy.D., the boy's therapist. She has been supportive and appreciates the observations and feedback regarding the child in a non-therapeutic setting.

Ozgun Tumer, CYS-Project Together mentor, suggests that prospective mentors should, "Just try it!"

---

For those interested in becoming mentors, Ozgun offers this advice, "Just try it! It's really fun. It's rewarding because you can see you are making a difference."

Indeed, Ozgun has made a difference in this child's life, not only by his consistent presence, but also by his willingness to share a part of his life and his experiences.

Thank you Ozgun for your service.—Sunney Shin, Volunteer Coordinator, North Region a week at the school to socialize in groups or individually, play basketball or cribbage, walk, talk and share their lives. There is no tutoring, counseling or goal to achieve. Mentors are asked for a one-year commitment. Apparently an hour a week of someone's undivided attention makes a difference. The results indicate that the students with mentors attend school more regularly, often improve in their class work, have become more responsible and have a better attitude about school in general. It has been so successful, kids are asking the principals for mentors...
